

Viselio launches full automatization of Visa Applications

In the last two years, the Swiss startup Viselio has revolutionized the complicated visa application procedure with its innovative software. The online Visa service now has developed a solution for the integration of Passenger Name Records (PNRs) from Amadeus and Galileo. This enables the full automatization of visa applications for TMCs and travel agencies.

Bern/Berlin, 5.12.2019 – The new solution, developed in collaboration with technology partner Funnel.Travel, enables Viselio to scan PNRs (all relevant data and processes relating to flight booking) from Amadeus and Galileo, to determine whether a visa or other travel document is required for a particular trip.

If this is the case, Viselio generates a visa application directly from the PNR data. This can then be automatically augmented with further data from third-party systems - such as profile data from Umbrella Faces or from previous visa applications from Viselio. The traveler then receives an automated email with the pre-filled visa application, which contains the already available data and can be completed. With one simple click, the traveler's visa application is now ready to be processed further. This way, the process of visa application becomes much easier, and there's no need for the data to be re-entered.

"Progress is our mission. It is enormously important to us to keep designing better solutions for our customers" says CEO Niklas Zeller. The integration of Amadeus and Galileo was the only logical step. This new solution will be launched at the beginning of December 2019.

Expansion

The visa service provider Viselio is now present in seven European markets, including Germany, Austria, Switzerland, France, Great Britain, Sweden, and the Netherlands. The company is currently preparing to expand into the USA.
